

FAQ:

How is CMI recognised in the USA

The Chartered Management Institute (CMI) is the leading authority in management and leadership in the UK, and its qualifications are recognised globally.

How does it work?

International Presence: CMI has established relationships and partnerships with educational institutions, businesses, and organisations across the world - this offers a wide reach and recognition of CMI qualifications across the world.

Qualification Framework: CMI qualifications are aligned with the Regulated Qualifications Framework (RQF) in the UK, which is a globally recognised framework.

Accredited Centers Worldwide: CMI has accredited centers in many countries, not just in the UK. Please see more information here.

Chartered Manager Status: The Chartered Manager status is a recognised status across many countries. It signifies an individual's expertise, experience, and ethical commitment in management.

Mutual Recognition: CMI often engages in mutual recognition agreements with professional bodies in other countries. These agreements can facilitate the transferability of qualifications and memberships between institutions, making it easier for professionals to move and work internationally.

Educational Institutions: Some US universities and colleges offer CMI qualifications (e.g. CMI Level 7 is part of The American University of Science - Executive Master of Business Administration (EMBA) qualification) and some recognise CMI qualifications - especially when they have international programs or partnerships with UK institutions. If you have a CMI qualification and wish to pursue further education in the US, individual institutions will evaluate your CMI qualification on a case-by-case basis.

Professional Recognition: Professionals who possess CMI qualifications can use them as evidence of their expertise and training when applying for roles or projects in the US.

Networking: CMI, being an international organisation, provides its members with networking opportunities globally. You are always in a good company of excellent professionals.

Endorsement from Businesses: Many multinational corporations, particularly those with a presence in the UK, are well aware of CMI and the value of its qualifications
